

Queen Bees

Salley Alley
Adam Daland
Billie Karel
Vanessa Lucas
Crystal-Fair Melbourne
Gwen Hastings Pound
Nicole Stewart
Alice Tejada
Louisa Warren
Jennifer Woody
Kate Woomer-Deters
Heather Yandow

the beehive collective: Pollinating community giving in Raleigh by inspiring young women to lead.

In a nutshell

We are a group, primarily made up of young women, organizing fun projects together in Raleigh by pooling our collective talents and resources to raise meaningful amounts of money for causes we care about.

Goals

- Have fun pooling our money and diverse talents and resources to raise meaningful amounts of money for the causes we care about.
- Raise and give away meaningful amounts of money to local non-profits whose work we appreciate.
- Foster the development of young women as leaders in our community.

Membership

To join, we require a personal contribution of half a percent of annual income each year, in addition to contributing time and talent.

We are looking for inspired and talented young men and women from diverse personal and professional backgrounds to join our hive! We are an equal opportunity group at every level and welcome all with energy and skills to offer our work, regardless of their race, age, gender, religion, sexuality, level of income or education, disability or immigration status.

2010 Theme

The beehive collective has selected FOOD as its 2010 theme. Food is an important and timely theme as it touches on many other issues: the environment, health, economics, and social justice. The Beehive Collective will work this year to broaden our understanding about food production, access, consumption and education and will work to share this information with the Raleigh community. We hope to learn what we can do as individuals and as a community to increase the safety, sustainability, and social equity of our food systems in Raleigh and will focus our 2010 grantmaking efforts around these goals.

Join!

We want you to join the beehive collective and help address this important issue. You can help identify organizations making an impact on the issue of Food. You can help raise money and raise awareness about this issue. And most importantly, you can have a great time doing it.

thebeehivecollective.org